SECTION - A*(READING)

1-5 Read the following passage and answer the questions that follow:

Is the modern man less physically fit than his ancestors? This is a question that has bothered many doctors and others concerned with human health and environment in the modern world. We are so used to the comforts that modern technology has given to mankind that we forget how important it is for man to keep himself physically fit. We have tended to be misled by the decrease in the human death-rate made possible by modern medicine. No matter how underdeveloped a country is, people no longer die in thousands because of diseases like small-pox and cholera which caused untold misery and death until not very long ago. But a lowered death-rate does not necessarily mean that modern man is healthier than his ancestors. Modern man is more prone to heart disease and cancer which were unknown in the past.

In olden days people were aware of the advantages of a life pattern that provided enough physical exercise for them. Accounts of ancient civilizations are full of tales of physical endurance. The ancient man knew the value of physical labour and healthy ways of life. He did not live in crowded cities where millions of people today live crowded together. He did not have to worry about exhaust fumes and cigarette smokes, nor did he suffer from an atmosphere polluted by bellowing factory-chimneys and nuclear explosions.

The modern man is so surrounded by the artificial comforts that science has made possible that he seldom thinks of the need for physical exercise. A typical city-dweller spends most of his time sitting-at home, at work, even during hours of recreation. He prefers sitting in cinema-seat or in any easy chair before a television-set to going on a picnic or on a walking tour in the country side. He participates in sports as a spectator sitting in a crowded stadium.

To be physically fit, one does not have to be a he-man of the Tarzan brand. One does not have to be a champion of weight lifter to lead a healthy life. All one needs is regular physical exercise that will keep the body fit and in working order. Swimming, Walking, Skipping and Running are types of exercise that keep the body toned up without causing too much strain.

Modern man's disregard for physical fitness is not only a cause for immediate anxiety, it may effect the future of mankind. There are indications that lack of physical exercises coupled with increasingly polluted environment will lead to the ultimate end of the human race.

His house is in the village though;
He will not see me stopping here
To watch his woods fill up with snow.

My little horse must think it queer
To stop without a farmhouse near
Between the woods and frozen lake
The darkest evening of the year.

He gives his harness bells a shake
To ask if there is some mistake.
The only other sound's the sweep
Of easy wind and downy flake.

The woods are lovely dark and deep,
But I have promises to keep,
And miles to go before I sleep,
And miles to go before I sleep.
